Customer Reviews

Disappointing calender. Every year I purchase the brown trout lighthouse weekly planner. I purchase this calender for the pictures and this year the pictures are small and not impressive. This the pages are not glossy as in previous years. The calender has taken a big step down from last year.

Thought I would try something different--I usually get the Sierra Club engagement calendar. Positives for this calendar-- heavy, good quality paper for the pages, clear print. In addition to the week on one side, there are three months (current, previous, and future) displayed which is nice for scheduling or looking ahead without flipping pages. Also, there is an area for general notes for the week, separate from the notes area for each day of the week. These are all nice features. The negatives for this calendar is that the pages are fairly small (6 inches wide by just under 8 inches tall). Because of the space allotted for the 3 month display and the general notes on the facing page, there is not much space for the photo, so all the photos are small. If the calendar were a bit bigger, the photos could be bigger. The photos are nice, but many of them do not "pop." Perhaps they are too realistic, like your own snaps? And perhaps I am wrong about "the photos could be bigger" -- maybe their resolution is such that you could not make them bigger without them getting blurrier. So, some nice features, but pages could be bigger and photos could be better. Decent calendar though.

I have been using these calendar books for over 20 years and was disappointed in the new design of this year's book. Instead of a full picture on one page facing the engagement page it now has only half a picture on the picture page with note space below. There has always been more than enough space on the engagement page to make any needed notes so it seems like a waste to me.
